Sen. Hillary Clinton speaks Tuesday at the Democratic National Convention in Denver. AP PHOTO

MOWINGON

Clinton says name of the game is unity, and the star player is Obama

Washington Post

DENVER At noon on Tuesday, two young men walked onto the podium at the Democratic National Convention carrying four women's suit jackets-red, orange, light blue and teal —and holding each one up to the lights to see which would look best in the hall.

It was Hillary Clinton's night, and nothing was being left to chance.

Would she go with the orange or red, colors that attract attention? Or the blue or green, which have calming properties?

Nine hours later, Clinton emerged on the podium - in vibrant orange.

The thousands of delegates and spectators in the hall—even the Barack Obama supporters-raised white Hillary signs. Loudspeakers played her campaign theme, "Yes, she can change the world." Clinton earned adoring cheers, cries of "we love you" and more than a few tears as she recalled her campaign and "sisterhood of the traveling pantsuits." A video preceding her speech identified Bill Clinton only as "Hillary's Husband."

The nomination may belong to Barack Obama, but Hillary Clinton owned the convention hall Tuesday night.

She used the spotlight to play the loyal Democratic soldier. She got right to the point: "Whether you voted for me, or voted for Barack, the time is now to unite as a single party with a single purpose." And she stuck with that theme through her speech. "Barack Obama is my candidate, and he must be our president," she said. She then turned to a full-throated attack on John McCain. "It makes sense that George Bush and John McCain will be together next week in the Twin Cities, because these days they're awfully hard to tell apart."

But to see Clinton arrive for her walkthrough rehearsal at lunchtime Tuesday, one could have been forgiven for thinking she is the nominee. A couple of hundred reporters and cameramen awaited her arrival. She emerged waving left, right and center, and pointing at the skyboxes. She studied the teleprompters and bopped her head from side to side, as if dancing.

By nightfall, Clinton was able to shed her misgivings, at least for the 30 minutes she occupied the stage. She delivered a challenge to her supporters: "I want you to ask yourselves: Were you in this campaign just for me?" Or, she asked, "Were you in it for all the people in this country who feel invisible?"

That question is yet to be answered. But felt invisible.

whatever else she was Tuesday night, the orange-clad Clinton could not possibly have

Electronic failure delays flights nationwide

Associated Press

ATLANTA An electronic communication failure Tuesday at a Federal Aviation Administration facility in Georgia that processes flight plans for the eastern half of the U.S. caused mass flight delays around the country. The Northeast was hardest hit.

But by evening, the FAA said the situation around the country was returning to normal, with delays remaining in Atlanta and Chicago.

At one point, an FAA Web site that tracks airport status showed delays at some three dozen major airports across the country. The site advised passengers to "check your departure airport to see if your flight may be affected."

The FAA said the glitch appeared to have involved a software problem.

FAA spokeswoman Kathleen Bergen in Atlanta said there were no safety issues and officials were still able to speak to pilots on planes on the ground and in the air.

She said she did not know exactly how many flights were affected, but she said it was in the hundreds. The FAA did not expect to have total figures until Wednesday. Bergen said that in a 24-hour period the FAA processes more than 300,000 flight plans in the U.S.

LATEST WORD

As a pet owner, I sympathize with those who need to use the CTA to get their pets to the vet. However, hold the carrier on your lap. People should not have to stand because you are taking up a seat with your pet carrier. The same goes for you shoppers. Yes, people have to stand regularly. But the purpose of the buses and the trains is to move people. And people should have priority over packages and pets. -Posted by jlp at redeyechicago.

Weigh in on more mass transit issues and ask Kyra Kyles questions at redeyechicago. com/ctablog.

Readers bark out at pets on the CTA

Dog and cats bring out strong sentiments

Do you support the CTA's policy to allow some pets onboard buses and the "L"? Or are you sneezing from allergies, irritated by carriers on seats and generally against pets on public transit? "Going Public's" Kyra Kyles explored the prickly pet issue in Tuesday's column. Riders were all over the mass transit map with their opinions.

Restrict pets, please

Non-service animals should not be allowed on the CTA, period. Some people have phobias, some are allergic. You should not be subject to this on public transportation. And they should certainly not take up a seat. Take a cab if it's that important.

JENNIFER RAMIREZ, 28, BRIDGEPORT

What about pesky people?

After reading "Pets and the CTA," it upsets me how some people just love to complain. A carrier occupying a seat? Well, is having four baby carriers (Northbound Pulaski bus on Friday) on a crowded bus warranted because babies, a.k.a. humans, are occupying not one [seat], but the entire reserved seating and obstructing passengers from getting on and off the bus? Drivers don't bother telling the parents to wait for another bus. I don't drive. I have a phobia after a freak accident. I also have two cats, one with chronic health problems. I have to take three buses to get to his vet. How would I do that without [the] CTA? Dumb people can question it all they want. If anything, we, as people, are the nuisance.

DIANA CERVANTES, 21, LITTLE VILLAGE

Blame crowding, not critters

This is a response to the lady who complained about someone bringing a dog in a carrier aboard the bus and taking up an extra seat. The issue here is not the dog in the carrier, but the bus being crowded. I've heard passengers get irate about strollers, shopping carts, luggage, passengers with backpacks, anything that gets in the way. If the woman with the dog had moved the carrier and some moron jumped into the seat before you could sit down, would you have been happy? FELICIA JOHNSON, 58, RAVENSWOOD

Give pet owners a break

I guess Kimberly Daniel woke up on the wrong side of the bed the other morning, as her grouchy complaint about a dog (in a carrier) on the bus ["Hey, CTA!" Aug. 20]. She complains that the bus driver would allow a pet on her bus. I've taken my cat to the vet on the bus - also in a carrier - several times and can't see how it is any different than taking on a shopping bag from the store or a backpack. Certainly it is less intrusive than some of the huge strollers riders take on all the time. And I bet the dog was more well-behaved than most of the kids I see on the bus. Give pet owners a break. As long as the animal is behaving, there is no reason whatsoever they can't ride along with their owners as long as they remain in a proper carrier.

BRIGHTON PARK

Robbery goes awry

Two men who tried to hold up Brighton Mini Mart at 2532 W. 47th St. in Brighton Park on Monday didn't succeed quite as planned. One robber shot himself in the foot, got stabbed by a store employee and ended up in police custody at a hospital after trying to get treatment for his injuries, Chicago police said. The other fled.

EAST CHATHAM

Man gunned down

A 63-year-old man believed to be on his way home from work was fatally shot late Monday in East Chatham, police said Tuesday. The shooting happened at East 79th Street and South Ellis Avenue. Witnesses saw the victim, Herbert Balentine, 63, collapse near a bus, police said, citing preliminary information.

Day care held up

Two armed men robbed employees of a day-care facility Tuesday on the West Side, but no children were harmed, police said, adding that the children were asleep upstairs. The men entered the building in the 4100 block of West 16th Street and demanded money, according to a police spokesman.

Metra's last call

Commuter line to shut its 'refreshment cars'

Chicago Tribune

Every weekday at 5:17 p.m., the bar car on Metra's Milwaukee District West train becomes the place where everybody knows your name and they're always glad you came.

With beer and wine cups in hand, a cast of characters that seems straight out of "Cheers" tries to make the daily commute home as merry as the sitcom.

"It's happy hour on the rails," said Kevin McHone, 40, an information technology engineer from Gilberts.

But just as every TV show eventually ends its run, this Friday will be the last call aboard what Metra officially calls its "refreshment cars."

The commuter rail line has decided to shut down its rolling taverns, ending an era that hearkens back to the days when executives in gray flannel suits climbed aboard club cars and lubricated the journey home with martinis.

There are 10 trains with bar cars running on Metra's Rock Island and Milwaukee District West and North lines. There were more refreshment cars years ago, but Metra has been phasing them out as contracts with vendors expired. The last contract runs out this week.

Transit agencies are concerned about what happens after passengers who have had a few drinks hop into their cars, said Mantill Williams, an association spokesman.

But Metra says a concern about alcohol

Until now, Chicago and New York were believed to be the only cities where riders could still buy a drink aboard a commuter train, according to the American Public Transportation Association.

The regulars on the 5:17 laugh heartily as the jokes fly. Riders carry conversations across the seats and aisle. For a long time, a running poker game was conducted on a makeshift card table spread across the baggage rack.

"I come to the bar car so I can be loud, obnoxious and have a good time at the end of the workday," said Chris Laracuenta, 39, of South Elgin.

"These people just want to be around people who are lively and not reliving the workday or dreading going home or whatever it is. ... Some people go to happy hour. We go to the bar car."

Free CTA rides come at a cost

Gov. Blagojevich on Tuesday trumpeted signing a measure to give free bus and train rides to poor people with disabilities, but neglected to mention that there's no state money for the program.

The decision means the Regional Transportation Authority, which oversees the CTA, Metra and Pace, will have to scrounge up $5 million to $10 million more.

RTA officials previously have warned that service cuts or fare hikes might be needed to cover the cost of the free rides. Mass transit agencies already were reeling from Blagojevich's budget cut of $37.3 million that was supposed to pay for the free rides for seniors the governor ordered up in January. On Tuesday, the agency was "still evaluating" the budget impact, RTA spokesman JC Vannatta said.

CTA President Ron Huberman said Blagojevich's actions cause great "concern" for the cashstrapped agency.

"The CTA is very happy to be able to provide free rides for those individuals who are disabled and least able to pay," Huberman said Tuesday. "That being said, unfortunately there is nothing free about free rides as they have a cost to the CTA."

YELLOW LINE DETAILS

A possible extension of the Yellow Line north from Skokie's Dempster Station would either be a rail along an existing right-of-way or a rapid-transit bus along Gross Point Road, officials said Tuesday.

CTA officials told a crowd of about 50 in Skokie that the options were narrowed from 11 possibilities and the extension would go no farther north than Old Orchard Road.

The Yellow Line now consists of two stops: Dempster and Howard. A new Yellow Line stop has been approved for Oakton Street in Skokie and another stop may be added in Evanston.

Phung Thien Nhan plays with a toy Tuesday during a visit to the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago. The 2-year-old lost his leg as an infant in Vietnam after he was abandoned in a forest for 72 hours and was mauled by a wild animal. CHUCK BERMAN/TRIBUNE

Rescued 2-year-old gets love in Chicago

Watching 2-year-old Phung Thien Nhan scoot merrily around an examination room at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago, making excited conversation with strangers and burning through toys with a toddler's fickle taste, one would never know that he'd been rescued not once, but twice from life-threatening situations.

The first rescue came when villagers found the newborn Thien Nhan abandoned by his teenage mother in a forest in Vietnam, still alive despite 72 hours in the wilderness and severe injuries from an animal mauling. Doctors had to remove his right leg, but they saved his life, prompting a group of Buddhist monks to give him a name that means "angelic child."

But Thien Nhan also needed a second rescue when Vietnamese journalist Tran Mai Anh found the boy living in poor conditions with his grandparents.

Worried for the boy's safety and health, Mai Anh fought a five-month battle to adopt Thien Nhan with her husband, Phung Quang Nghinh, and began to raise money for the boy's medical care. Their efforts led Thien Nhan to the Rehabilitation Institute, the second medical stop on a tour of the U.S.

"He has been very happy, very active and cheerful," Mai Anh said as she watched Thien Nhan place stickers on her husband's face. "He's been singing a lot of songs, and he didn't sing before."

On Tuesday, Thien Nhan was evaluated at the institute by prosthetic specialists, who said that with modifications to his prosthetic leg and physical therapy, he should be able to walk normally in a matter of years.

Heads-up on digital TV conversion

If you have an analog TV and are receiving free stations using an antenna, your TV won't pick up a signal after Feb. 17 without a converter box. Most newer TVs, including those manufactured after 2004, have digital tuners built in so they are not affected. TVs hooked up to cable, satellite or other pay services also do not need a converter box.

The government is supplying coupons to help cover the cost of the boxes, but as Stan Krylow found out, the process isn't always as easy as it should be. He got help from the Tribune's problem solver column, "What's Your Problem?"

Here's a little help so you are prepared:

How do I apply for converter box coupons?

Households are eligible to receive two $40 coupons from the federal government. The boxes sell for $40 to $70. To receive your coupons, call 888-388-2009, apply at dtv2009.gov or print out an application and mail it to P.O. Box 2000, Portland, OR, 97208-2000.

Who is eligible for the coupons?

Each household can receive two coupons. If your mailing address is not what the program considers a household, you aren't eligible. That means if you receive mail through a post office box or share a common mailbox, you aren't eligible.

What if I'm not eligible or if my application is rejected?

A relative or friend can apply for the coupons and give them to you.

Frankly, hot dogs won't kill you

If you've seen the pro-vegetarian sponsored commercial that links hot dogs with cancer, there's good news and bad news. The bottom line from several nutritionists familiar with the ad is this: Hot dogs aren't exactly a "health food," but eating one every now and then probably won't hurt you.

A woman was charged in Claymont, Del., with plotting the real-life abduction of a boyfriend she met through the virtual reality Web site "Second Life." Court records say Kimberly Jernigan, 33, drove to the 52-year-old man's apartment Thursday with a stun gun, handcuffs and duct tape.

DENVER Three men who authorities initially feared were plotting to assassinate Barack Obama at the Democratic National Convention are facing only gun charges-signaling they never posed a real threat.

A federal law enforcement official in Denver said the three men and a woman also arrested on Sunday are not expected to be charged with making threatening statements, conspiracy or other national security-related crimes.

It's possible—but unlikely-that additional charges could come later, the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity because the charges have not yet been filed.

One of the men was arrested near Denver with two rifles, ammunition, walkie-talkies and suspected drugs. Federal officials say two other men and a woman were apprehended a few hours later.

The likelihood of an assassination attempt on Democratic presidential candidate Obama was downplayed by law enforcement officials in Colorado and Washington.

"We're absolutely confident there is no credible threat to the candidate, the Democratic National Convention, or the people of Colorado," U.S. Attorney Troy Eid said in a statement.

Replay ball!

Baseball allows umps to review 'boundary calls'

Associated Press

NEW YORK Replay ball!

Umpires will be allowed to check video on home run calls starting Thursday after Major League Baseball, guardian of America's most traditional sport, reversed its decades-long opposition to instant replay.

"Like everything else in life, there are times that you have to make an adjustment," baseball commissioner Bud Selig said following Tuesday's announcement. "My opposition to unlimited instant replay is still very much in play. I really think that the game has prospered for well over a century now doing things the way we did it."

The 74-year-old Selig, who described himself as "old fashioned" and an admirer of baseball's "human element," softened his opposition following a rash of blown calls this year.

For now, video will be used only on socalled "boundary calls," such as determining whether fly balls went over the fence, whether potential home runs were fair or foul and whether there was fan interference on potential home runs.

"Any time you try to change something in baseball, it's both emotional and difficult," Selig said. "There's been some concern that, well, if you start here, look what it's going to lead to. Not as long as I'm the commissioner."

Replay will go into use with three series scheduled to open Thursday: Philadelphia at the Cubs, Minnesota at Oakland and Texas at the L.A. Angels. For other games, replays will be available to umpires starting Friday.

Baseball general managers voted 25-5 last November to recommend using the technology, and baseball's lawyers spent recent weeks finalizing agreements with the unions for umpires and for players.

Baseball officials wanted to avoid having a situation in the postseason where fans with access to TVs and viewers at home knew what the correct call was but the umpires on the field did not.

"Some people thought that we ought to wait until the postseason," Selig said. "I'd rather go into the postseason knowing that we've already used it."

LOU PINIELLA

"I'd love to be able to throw a red hankie or a green hankie. Imagine being able to throw something on the field and not be ejected. I shouldn't say it's not going to work, but this could turn into a little bit of a fiasco initially."

The Cubs manager wondered whether a team could challenge a call

"I don't like it. I think that it overshot the mark by far just because, what, in a Yankee game someone didn't get a homer? Please. It's happened thousands of times. That's part of the game. It's the beauty of the game. Mistakes are made."

KENNY ROGERS

The Detroit Tigers pitcher on Major League Baseball's decision to start allowing umpires to consult instant replay on home run calls

"I find it very strange that, with 30 games to go in the season, that they would start it now. I find that very peculiar."

HOW IT WILL WORK

- » Video from available broadcast feeds—not every team televises every game—will be collected at the office of Major League Baseball Advanced Media in New York, where it will be monitored by a technician and either an umpire supervisor or a retired umpire.
- » If the crew chief at a game decides replay needs to be checked, umpires will leave the field, technicians at MLBAM will show umpires the video and the crew chief will make the call, overturning the original decision only if there is "clear and convincing evidence."
- »Leaving the dugout to argue a call following a replay will result in an automatic ejection.
- » Replays of the boundary calls will not be shown on stadium video boards, said MLB executive vice president for baseball operations Jimmie Lee Solomon.

Zell confirms it: 5 Cubs bidders

Associated Press

NEW YORK Tribune Co. CEO Sam Zell said Tuesday that the media conglomerate has chosen five bidders for the Cubs, which also was reported by the Tribune last week.

Zell said during a conference call with lenders that separate bids have been made on storied Wrigley Field, the nation's second-oldest baseball stadium. The team's sale must be approved by Major League Baseball.

"We hope to have a deal to MLB by the end of the year," said Zell, the real estate mogul who led a $8.2 billion buyout of the company last year. He said he expects "rapid" approval.

Chicago area's Kevin Duckworth dies of unknown causes

LINCOLNCITY, Ore. Former Portland Trail Blazers center Kevin Duckworth, a "gentle giant" with a feathery touch from the paint, has died. He was 44.

Duckworth, part of a Trail Blazers goodwill tour, was scheduled to hold a basketball clinic on the Oregon coast when he died Monday night. The Depoe Bay Fire Department said it responded about 10 p.m. to a report of a man who was down and not breathing at Salishan Lodge at Gleneden Beach, north of Newport on the central coast.

The cause of death was to be determined by a medical examiner but the Lincoln County sheriff's office said there was no indication of foul play.

"Within the world of basketball, within those Trail Blazers teams, he was a jokester," said Phoenix Suns coach Terry Porter, who played with Duckworth. "He was a big loving teddy bear. At times guys got frustrated because he didn't have a mean streak. He was just a great guy. He loved the team atmosphere, loved being a teammate in those successful Blazer teams."

The 7-foot Duckworth averaged 11.8 points and 5.8 rebounds over 11 seasons in the NBA, helping Portland reach the NBA finals in 1990 and 1992. The two-time All-Star also played for San Antonio, Washington, Milwaukee and the L.A. Clippers.

Porter said Duckworth had battled weight problems recently.

"You wake up in the morning and it's your first news of the day, it just kind of hits you," Porter told The Associated Press on Tuesday. "For me, I spent so much time with that young man and had so much success with him. It really hurt. It's almost like losing a brother."

Duckworth grew up in the Chicago area and was drafted by the San Antonio Spurs out of Eastern Illinois University in 1986.

The Spurs traded him that season to the Trail Blazers, where he had his greatest success, playing with Porter, Clyde Drexler, Buck Williams and Jerome Kersey on two Western Conference championship teams.

Duckworth remained in the Portland area after he retired in 1997, doing woodwork, fishing and hunting.

Former Trail Blazers center Kevin Duckworth, seen playing during a game against the Bulls in Portland, Ore., in 1991, passed away Monday. TRIBUNE FILE

lan's Pizza by the Slice

3463 N. Clark St. 773-525-4580

The basics: Like so many Big 10 college types, this small outfit from Madison, Wis., picked Wrigleyville when it was time to branch out. The prime Clark Street location caters to Cubs fans, beer-drinking ex-frat boys and others prone to activities that lead to craving pizza at 2 a.m. A pizza counter means little wait for slice seekers. Grab yours and go or take a seat at a table in the super-casual dining area.

The pizza: lan's does big, foldable, New York-style slices ($2.75-$3.75) and pies ($9-$28). You could go traditional with toppings like sausage and mushrooms, but you'd be missing the point. This place is known for far-out toppings and unusual sauce bases on its specialty pizzas. BBQ Steak and Fries pizza, anyone?

Craziest pizza: In a stroke of brilliance, lan's has combined pizza and macaroni and cheese in one perfect indulgence. The Mac N' Cheese pizza (12-inch $12, 20-inch $24, slice $3.75) is lan's top-selling slice—and that's saying a lot, considering the competition includes Buffalo Chicken and Philly Cheese Steak.

Beyond pizza: Salads, brownies.

Delivery: No. It's all about immediate gratification.

Purgatory Pizza

3415 N. Clark St. 773-975-6677

The basics: This Wrigleyville spot, a sibling to beer and barbecue-focused Risque Cafe next door, goes out of its way to deliver on its theme. The walls are painted with smoke and leaping flames. The ceiling is an idyllic blue, dotted with perfect clouds. In between, served to you at rustic wooden tables, there's pizza. We can think of worse fates.

The pizza: You've got two options: thin crust and Purgatory pie. The thin crust is cracker-like toward the edges and soft-some might say mushy-in the middle; Purgatory pies pack toppings between two layers of crust. There's a build-your-own option and six specialty pizzas ($13.45-$20.45), loaded with everything from turkey to eggplant and squash.

Craziest pizza: Top honors go to the Temperance pizza, spread with Risque's Buffalo Trace-spiked barbecue sauce and topped with hunks of brisket, tomatoes, red onion, jalapenos and cheddar cheese. Other specialty pizzas with silly names like Turkey Limbo (cheddar cheese, turkey, bacon, Canadian bacon and fresh lettuce) are offbeat enough, but don't quite compare.

Beyond pizza: Smoked wings from Risque, a few appetizers, salads, and seven sandwiches-named for the seven deadly sins, of course.

Delivery: Yes, roughly from Montrose to North Avenue and Western Avenue to the lake.

Paula & Monica's

1518 W. Chicago Ave. 312-929-3615

The basics: This West Town spot is strictly a carryout and delivery operation, so their modest Chicago Avenue storefront doesn't bother to put on airs. There's no seating-just a single beverage cooler, a menu on the wall and a counter at which to order and pay.

The pizza: The thin-crust pizza is a good pick if you're partial to chewy crusts, versus crispier or doughier styles. Your other option is pan pizza. Build your own ($9-$13 for sausage, cheese or pepperoni, $1.50-$2.25 for each additional topping) or go for one of eight specialty pizzas ($14-$17). There's also a slice-and-soda option ($4-$4.50).

Craziest pizza: Paula & Monica's is the most traditional of this bunch, but the Mexican pizza makes them a player in the wacky toppings game. If you'd rather save the ground beef, cilantro, jalapenos, pico de gallo, sour cream and guacamole for your tacos, go for the B.L.T. (bacon, lettuce, tomato, olive oil).

Beyond pizza: Subs, hot sandwiches, salads, slow-roasted chicken and a few appetizers. For dessert, there's Italian ice, gelato and cannoli from Bensenville's Angelo Gelato.

Delivery: Yes, within a 3-mile radius.

Got that swing?

Go to metromix.com for the full Jazz Fest schedule and a list of top five local artists playing the fest.

We pick your daily can't-miss shows at the 30th annual Chicago Jazz Fest

By Mark Loehrke

Like the musical genre it celebrates, the Chicago Jazz Festival has seen its share of ups and downs over the past three decades. But as the free fest turns 30 this Labor Day weekend, we'd argue that this annual extravaganza has never looked-or sounded-better. Consider this: The schedule between opening night Thursday (Sonny Rollins) and Sunday's closing set (Ornette Coleman) could consist of little more than a toy monkey playing the cymbals, and this year's lineup would still outclass most of its predecessors.

Among the dozens of local and national artists appearing, these are the sets to anchor your weekend.

THURSDAY

Sonny Rollins

6:30 p.m. Millennium Park's Jay Pritzker Pavilion, 201 E. Randolph St.

Technically this veteran sax man is the only act scheduled for opening night. Still, few performers would be more worthwhile than this jazz titan in such an acoustically sublime setting.

FRIDAY

Isotope 217

Noon. Jazz on Jackson stage The long-dormant Chicago jazz/rock/ electronic outfit-featuring Exploding Star Orchestra mastermind Rob Mazurek on cornet and ubiquitous guitarist Jeff Parker-regroups for a potentially raucous lunchtime set to kick off the fest's first full day.

AACM Tribute

6 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell Multi-instrumentalist and Association for the Advancement of Creative Musicians founding member Roscoe Mitchell leads this freewheeling homage to a Chicago jazz institution.

Dee Dee Bridgewater

Dee Dee Bridgewater

7:10 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell Any notions of an artist being intimidated by the shadow of her tribute subject should evaporate when Bridgewater-one of the top female jazz singers working today-honors one of the all-time greats, Betty Carter.

SATURDAY

drums.

Kenny Burrell

3:30 p.m. Jazz on Jackson stage He'll be featured later with the Gerald Wilson Orchestra (8:30 p.m., Petrillo Music Shell), but this afternoon's sidestage set gives listeners a chance to appreciate the legendary Detroit guitarist up close, playing with some of his favorite Chicago collaborators: Willie Pickens on piano, Larry Gray on bass and Joel Spencer on

Vijay Iyer Quintet

6 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell

Nuance and shading tend to be the two most unfortunate victims of Petrillo's acoustic free-for-all, but we hope conditions are kinder to pianist lyer and his innovative compositions, including a new Festival-commissioned piece.

Dave Douglas and Brass Ecstasy

7:10 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell

Trumpeter Douglas also has penned a new work specifically for the 30th anniversary celebration, to be performed with his five-piece homage to trumpeter Lester Bowie's Brass Fantasy band.

SUNDAY

Sean Jones Quintet

3:30 p.m. Jazz on Jackson stage Compared to the freewheeling improvisation promised later in the evening, there's nothing radically new about Jones' music. But anyone in search of straightforward jazz won't be disappointed by the lead trumpeter of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.

Eight Bold Souls with Dee Alexander

7:10 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell

Drop an adjective like "bold" into your band name and you'd better have the goods to back it up. Fortunately, this driving collective rarely takes a night off, and with reliable vocalist Alexander sitting in, Edward Wilkerson's crew promises to yet again live up to its moniker.

Ornette Coleman

8:30 p.m. Petrillo Music Shell

This eclectic multi-instrumentalist/alto sax legend is an excellent choice to close out this year's fest. Expect at least those doing so in amazement.

Flashback

Things that were big in the '90s are back with a vengeance. Check out our list of born-again TV stars, musicians, fads and fashions:

Dustin "Screech" Diamond >>

Once "Saved By the Bell's" lanky, likable dork, Diamond is no longer skinny. In fact, he recently re-emerged as a contestant on VH1's "Celebrity Fit Club. He's also no longer as likable after showing a propensity for trash talking and tantrums on VH1. And he's penning a confessional about his former meal ticket in "Behind the Bell," according to New York magazine.

Nintendo

It's back on top of the gaming industry, but this time in the form of Wii. The classic system that hooked us with Super Mario adventures now offers Wii-mote controlled flailing fun for the entire family.

Leggings

They're back, which is fine. Just don't revive the accompanying baby-doll dresses.

Pegged jeans

Just fold, roll and rock out. Katie Holmes is doing it, so it must be cool.

A New Kids on the Block

The guys are releasing a new album, "The Block" on Tuesday.

Bell Biv DeVoe

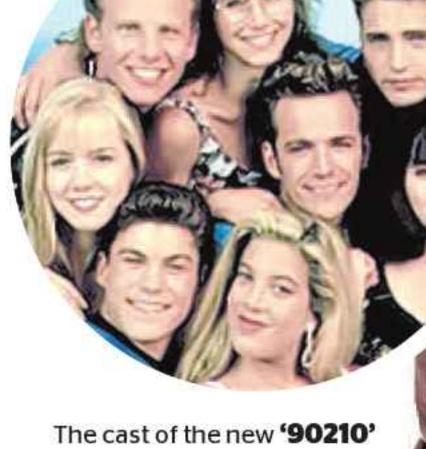

All together now: "That girl is poison." The fellas who broke off from New Edition and offered sex-tinged R&B hits performed at Chicago State University earlier this month.

Ben Stiller

Back in the '90s, he—along with Andy Dick and Janeane Garofolo—brought the funny in cult fave "The Ben Stiller Show." Stiller also directed "Reality Bites," a '90s-focused rom-com, in which he shared the screen with Ethan Hawke and Winona Ryder. Currently, Stiller—appearing as vacuous action star Tugg Speedman—is owning the box office with his controversial comedy "Tropic Thunder."

HOT DATE

Beef up on your old-school "Beverly Hills, 90210" before the new show, "90210," debuts on The CW on Tuesday. SOAPnet will broadcast a "BFFs of BH" marathon of the original teen drama all day Monday, according to TVWeek.

We the '90s

By Kyra Kyles

REDEYE

Dying to ditch your iPod for a CD player? Reminiscing about being deliciously scared by "Se7en"?

Still crushing on Christian Slater?

If you're succumbing to powerful waves of '90s nostalgia, you're not alone.

The decade that brought us grunge rock is back.

"Beverly Hills, 90210"—a '90s ratings juggernaut—will return as "90210" on Tuesday on The CW. Nineties stars Mario Lopez and Tori Spelling are back on TV, with Spelling starring in reality show "Home Sweet Hollywood" and Lopez now doing double duty as an "Extra" and "America's Best Dance Crew" host after a stint on "Dancing with the Stars." On the fashion front, Katie Holmes has recently been photographed by People magazine wearing an homage to '90s fashion: pegged jeans.

Nineties nostalgia also is evident on the local scene at decade-specific parties where club-goers in their 20s and 30s reminisce and rock out to music from Nirvana and Kriss Kross while donning throwback Tommy Hilfiger jeans or vibrant Cross Colours, a local party promoter told RedEye.

On the flip side, the '80s revival is almost over, partly because of overexposure.

"Eighties nostalgia is getting a little old hat," said Robert Thompson, a Chicago-born professor of pop

professor of pop culture at Syracuse

Jennie Garth (right) in the new "90210," and the original (inset).

University. Thompson said reality TV shows starring '80s icons, blog attention to '80s factoids, and movie remakes based on TV shows (including "Miami Vice") have rendered the era obsolete—again.

"When you made a Mr. T reference about a year ago, it was funny," Thompson said of the mohawk-rocking star. "But now if you make that reference now, someone might say 'enough is enough.'"

But young people are ravenous for '90s icons, according to Thompson, who said that he expects big things for "90210." "They will get two audiences," Thompson said. "People in their 20s and 30s who grew up watching the first one and a whole new generation of young people who identify with the new cast."

The show's new coexecutive producer Gabe Sachs told The Associated Press that "90210" will not stray far from the formula of hot, angstridden and mostly rich teens in the infamous ZIP code. Some of the show's original stars including Shannen Doherty and Jennie Garth—will be back.

But '90s reminiscing isn't limited to the remote control. Young club-goers devoted to the decade are reliving the not-so-olden days. Event promoter Jeff Beckham, who lives in Bronzeville, said his 432 Entertainment group is throwing a '90s party at Dragonfly Mandarin for the second time in less than a year due to demand.

"We had clips of 'Seinfeld,' 'Friends,' and even 'Mad About You,' playing on a screen," Beckham said of the party he threw at Mix in February. "We played music from k.d. lang to Madonna to Teddy Riley's 'New Jack Swing.' People were loving it."

Nineties nostalgia has invaded Thompson's classroom, he said, describing students' reactions to their pop culture course work.

"Old 'Saved by the Bell' episodes cause them to fall on the floor in fits of ecstasy," Thompson said of his students. "They also go completely nuts for soft drink commercials with the glass bottles. They love jeans commercials because they are so dated, the cut is so different. Nostalgia is a powerful thing." KKYLES@TRIBUNE.COM

'Traitor' on the right path but still misses

REVIEWS ONLINE

PLEASE MENTION AD CODE "TIMES"

Find more of Matt's Fast-Paised reviews at metromix.com.

Samir Horn (Don Cheadle), a former U.S. special operations soldier of Muslim faith, is in so deep with terrorists in the Middle East that FBI agents (Guy Pearce, Neil McDonough)—who don't know he's on their side—hunt him as a suspect. Their pursuit runs parallel to Samir's morally conflicted task of helping to plot a terrorist attack so he can sniff out the terrorist leaders.

Big question: Can writer-director Jeffrey Nachmanoff give "Traitor" more realism and common sense than the script he co-wrote for "The Day After Tomorrow"?

Skip it: "Traitor" glances over its most interesting ideas, like how Samir is driven by his father's murder at the hands of terrorists or why some Americans would fear his Muslim garb and prayer rituals. There's a sympathetic, un-biased exploration of anti-American perspectives; Said Taghmaoui is excellent as Samir's friend, devoted to both his pal and his violent mission. The film also has some genre excitement, but the plot holes escalate as quickly as the action.

Catch it: To hear agent Carter (Jeff Daniels) demonstrate the firm grip of government-speak: "This is a war. You do what it takes to win. We're the good guys." Not cliché. At all.

Bottom line: Even if "Traitor" is a step in the right direction—away from the on-the-nose dullness of "Lions for Lambs" or the violent hypocrisy of "Rendition"—its biggest failure is never allowing the audience to fully understand who Samir really is. Samir blankly slips through the cracks in a movie that does little to further the conversation about religious disputes or anti-terrorist efforts.

VOTE

Web geeks get Olympic marks

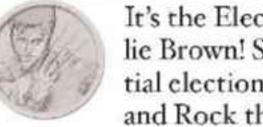

Welcome to the first official Geek Factor Index in RedEye.

I'll take a look at nerd-centric events and rate them according to the Geek Factor Formula, a complex mathematical equation that was developed by the Geek Think Tank in Stockholm. In honor of the Beijing Olympics that wrapped up Sunday, the Geek Factor winners will be awarded with medals - but not the traditional gold, silver and bronze. I'm giving out medals made of nerdier elements: "Adamantium" for first place; "Vibranium" for second place, and "Kryptonite" for third.

ADAMANTIUM MEDAL

Peanuts rocks the vote

It's the Electoral College Charlie Brown! Speaking of presidential elections, the Peanuts Gang and Rock the Vote have come together for an historic election, giving fans a chance to cast a vote for their favorite Peanuts character for president. Will Charlie Brown finally win something? Or will Lucy pull electoral votes away from him at the last second? My vote is for Snoopy, who as the World War I Flying Ace has never been captured behind enemy lines — unlike a certain Republican nominee. Visit peanutsrocksthevote.com to

>> "Peanuts" fans won't want to miss my video interview with Peter Robbins, the voice of Charlie Brown, at redeyechicago.com/geektome.

VIBRANIUM MEDAL

Presidential Material

Comic book publisher IDW on Oct. 8 will release graphic novelstyle biographies of presidential candidates Barack Obama and John McCain. The "Presidential Material" comics have been painstakingly researched to ensure historical accuracy and give a realistic portrayal of the characters, er, candidates. It's too bad they'll be so serious: I was looking forward to seeing a knock-down, drag-out battle between Obama Man and "The McCommando" over Mt. Rushmore. Visit presidential comics.com for more info.

RYPTONITE MEDAL

Chicago 1968 Politics reaches into the world of Web comics in Shadowline/ Image's "Chicago1968" (shadow linecomics.com). Written by Len Kody and drawn by Jenny Frison, the comic takes readers back to the controversial 1968 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. The story follows a cast of characters including Abbie Hoffman, Jerry Rubin and Mayor Richard J. Daley. The comic has yet to reveal if Daley had any superpowers outside of always getting his way.

Nina Garcia choses 10 looks for fall

The little black dress. "It's always reliably chic."

Statement jewelry. Garcia predicts a big comeback in Art Deco cuffs, chunky necklaces, gothic rosaries—which all can be layered.

Well-tailored jacket. It could be masculine or formfitting; the key is the fit.

Garcia

Lace. She'll be mixing lace with a white poplin shirt, mimicking the new Prada look, or with leather, a pairing she spotted on the Givenchy runway.

Floral prints.
"Don't retire your florals just because summer is over."

Clutch handbag.
"If you still have not invested in a clutch, this is the season to do so. There are so many styles
to choose from, from romantic to punk."

Sexy high heels. Garcia's recommendations include loafer styles and shoe booties.

Associated Press

Nina Garcia helps make the call on "Project Runway" about who's in and who's out.

In her new book "The One Hundred: A Guide to the Pieces Every Stylish Woman Must Own," she advises on what to buy and what to keep. So, what will Garcia—with her new day job as fashion director at Marie Claire—be wearing this fall? She e-mailed her top 10 looks:

Wide-leg trousers. These pants are for day or evening since the look will drastically change if they're made of pinstripes or satin—or even sequins.

A great coat. It's a key investment, she says, because it allows you to make an entrance with style.

A blouse, preferable with ruffles, lace or a bow. "The perfect feminine piece to complement the fall wardrobe. Perfect to frame the face and add some femininity to your tailored looks."

The sounds of music

Leads of 'Hamlet 2' put to the test

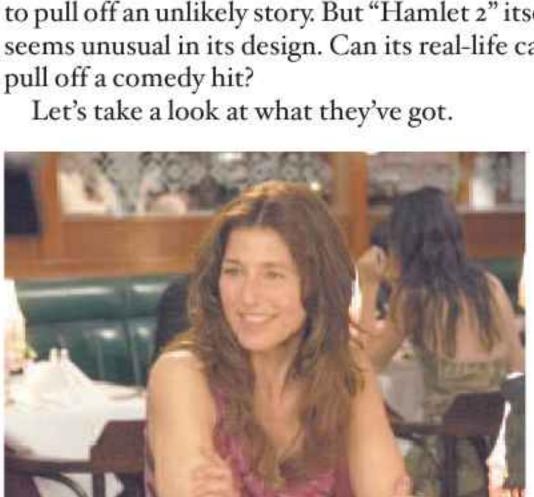

Ready to get your musical on?

With the campy comedy "Hamlet 2" in theaters, along with its infectious musical number, "Rock Me, Sexy Jesus," the time is now.

The outrageous tune, which already garnered its fair share of controversy, is all part of a movie about a failed actor-turnedhigh-schooldrama teacher who directs a stage sequel to Shakespeare's famous dramadespite the fact just about everybody dies in the first one. The movie is all about an unlikely crew trying to pull off an unlikely story. But "Hamlet 2" itself seems unusual in its design. Can its real-life cast

Catherine Keener

You know her as: The nice girl in "The 40 Year Old Virgin."

Good news: She has a lot of movies under her belt.

Bad news: A lot of them are dramas, not ridiculous comedies.

David Arguette

Verdict:

You know him from: All those "Scream" movies.

Good news: He's never met a goofball comedy he didn't like.

Bad news: For this project, there isn't any.

Elisabeth Shue

You know her from: Lots of roles, including "Leaving Las Vegas." (And "The Karate Kid," back in the day.)

Good news: She parodies herself in "Hamlet 2." Bad news: It's a small, bit part.

Steve Coogan

You know him as: The goofy director in "Tropic Thunder."

Good news: Coogan has proved he can ham it up.

Bad news: If he overdoes

Ferrell on our hands.

Verdict:

it, we could have another Will

Amy Poehler

You know her from: "Saturday Night Live's" Weekend Update, mainly.

Good news: Almost everything she touches seems to be a hit these days.

Bad news: See David Arquette.

Verdict:

Rocking the votes

Yes, Fall Out Boy's new record is due for a politically charged Nov. 4 release.

And, yes, it is a "political" album, singerguitarist Patrick Stump tells People magazine.

"But it's never going to say outright, 'Vote for Obama.'"

Speaking of voting, bassist Pete Wentz says Britney Spears is really the one to watch at the VMAs this year.

"To be honest, I don't think this is the Fall Out Boy's year," he said.

Dre's son dead

Dr. Dre's 20-year-old son, Andre Young Jr., has died, the rapper's publicist said Tuesday. Publicist Lori Earl confirmed the news to The Associated Press in a statement. Young Jr. was found dead Saturday by his mother at their home in suburban Woodland Hills, Calif., county coroner's Lt. John Kades said. The cause of death wasn't likely to be determined for eight weeks while toxicology tests are done, Kades said.

Got beats?

Lil Wayne's hit single almost didn't go to Lil Wayne. "Got Money" originally was intended to be a collaboration with rappers Pitbull and T-Pain, mtv.com reports. "Shout-out to Pitbull, he helped us put it together," says Skillz, part of production team Play N Skillz, which worked on the track. "It's the biggest record out right now, and we're making it rain."

OUT OF THE HOUSE

After some public complaints Tuesday, Snoop Dogg's trip to Australia may not be fo shizzle.

In 2007, the gangsta rapper was refused permission to apply for a visa because of his criminal record, Reuters reports. This week, immigration officials cleared the way for the Doggfather to come in October, when he is set to tour with Ice Cube.

The decision angered victims of crime groups, including the Australian Family Association, which has complained to the government to have the decision overturned.

Amid the criticism, the government is reviewing his character, according to Reuters. Snoop Dogg will not necessarily be barred from Australia, but he could be put on a tight leash, and he might be counseled before arrival and given strict behavior rules to abide by while in the country.

New judge gets Paula's vote—eventually

Paula Abdul has changed her tune about new "American Idol" judge Kara DioGuardi.

"It's about time another girl joined," Abdul told People magazine Monday night. "More girl power.

"This is great for the show. I've been waiting for this," the "Idol" vet added.

Paula's remarks were a bit of a departure from her comments earlier that day when songwriter-producer DioGuardi was announced as "Idol's" fourth judge. "I am concerned about the audience and their acceptance ... time will tell," she said in an interview with a Phoenix radio station.

Sounds like a flip-flop, doesn't it?

Let's get political—or not

Kid Rock's opinion on celebs and politics? Keep your opinions to yourselves.

"I truly believe that people like myself, who are in a position of entertainers in the limelight, should keep their mouth shut on politics," he tells network show "CMT Insider."

Apparently, Anne Hathaway didn't get the memo.

At the Democratic National Convention, the actress waxed poetic about how she was at first "afraid" of Barack Obama.

"I've been burned by politicians before that I wanted to believe in and just didn't live up to it," Hathaway told The Associated Press.

But after Obama gave his speech on race, "I just said, 'I can't deny how I feel about you, Barack Obama. I want you to be the president."

A Lohan love story? A new woman could be living with Lohan-Michael Lohan, that is. The 48-year-old father of Lindsay Lohan confirmed to E! that he proposed to his longtime girlfriend, 24year-old Erin Muller, and said the couple are picking out a ring-although he said the engagement was "not official" yet.

Lohan also commented on his daughter's famous DJ friend.

"People like Samantha Ronson don't need to be around Lindsay," Papa Lohan told El. "She shouldn't be dragging Lindsay around nightclubs. Who was Samantha Ronson before Lindsay Lohan? She was nobody. She is using her for her own gain,"
